$70,000 in Prize List of National Air Races

Program of 33 Events Arranged for Air Classic Set To Start in Cleveland Aug. 27 and To Continue Through Labor Day.

By United Press

CLEVELAND, Aug. 19—Cash prizes of $70,000 together with trophies emblematic of the highest achievements in aviation, await contestants in the 1932 National Air races.

A program of 33 events has been arranged for the flying classic, which opens Aug. 27 to continue through Labor day. All except three of the events are open to women pilots.

Officials of the races announced there will be five prizes for each event, with the exception of Sportsman Pilots' races, for which there will be three trophies awarded. Prizes are to be awarded as follows: First place, 45 per cent of the total purse; second place, 25 per cent; third place, 15 per cent; fourth place, 10 per cent; fifth place, 5 per cent.

Largest Purse

The largest purse is offered winners in the Bendix Trophy race—a trans-continental speed dash from United Airport, Burbank, Calif., to Cleveland. Awards total $15,000 and the winner is presented the Vincent Bendix trophy. In addition, a prize of $2,500 will be awarded to the pilot who proceeds on to New York and breaks the continental speed record in the shortest elasped time. J. T. "Jimmie" Doolittle won the event last year with an average speed of 223 miles per hour.

Sharing the spotlight in importance, is the Charles E. Thompson Trophy race which has become the world's airplane speed classic. The event, open to any type of airplane, offers a purse of $10,000 and the Charles E. Thompson trophy. Only fliers who can qualify at a speed of 200 miles an hour or better will be entered. The race is 10 laps of a 10-mile course.

$10,000 Race

Another $10,000 race is the Cord Cup race which will be run in two divisions. The eastern division will start from Washington, D. C., and the western division from Mines Field Inglewood, Cal., on Aug. 21. The two divisions will merge at Bartlesville, Okla., from where the two wings will proceed here. The Cord cup and the Cord cup plaque and two automobiles will be awarded the first and second places winners besides the prizes.

The Aerol trophy race, for women only, offers a purse of $5,000 and the Aerol trophy to winners in the 80-mile closed course event.

A purse of $3,500 is offered to winners in the qualifying trials for the Charles E. Thompson trophy race and prizes totalling $2,500 are offered in the Frank Phillips trophy race, a closed course speed event over eight laps of a ten-mile course open to planes with engines having not more than 300 cubic inch piston displacement.

Other Events

Other main events and their awards are as follows:

William B. Leeds Trophy race, starting Aug. 27 from Roosevelt Field, N. Y., to Cleveland via Middletob, Pa., and Wheeling, W. Va., and Akron, O. The purse is $2,000 and the William B. Leeds Trophy.

Cincinnati Trophy race with a purse of $2,000 and cash consolation prizes of $1,000 in a race from Cleveland to Cincinnati and return, including two laps of a ten-mile course at the start and at the finish.

Curtis, Garner Step Into Week's Political Spotlight

BY BYRON PRICE,
Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, Aug. 19—Save for echoes of President Hoover's acceptance speech and the daily grist from the still politically important personal inquiry by Governor Roosevelt into the case of Mayor Walker, vice presidential nominees took over the national campaign as another week rolled by.

A high point for political discussion lay in Vice President Curtis' unqualified declaration, in accepting renomination as Mr. Hoover's running mate, against repeal of the Eighteenth amendment. Yet the excursion from his Texas home of Speaker Garner, to attempt in person the enlistment of Alfred E. Smith and his New York and New England following in active support of the Roosevelt-Garner ticket vied for attention with the Curtis speech.

Notifications About Complete

Mr. Curtis, speaking at his notification ceremonies at Topeka, added fuel to the fire of prohibition discussion precipitated by President Hoover's acceptance address a week earlier. With the exception of publication of Garner's acceptance letter, the notification phase of the campaign is now complete.

That Democratic orators will make much of any differences in prohibition views they may profess to detect on comparison of the Hoover and Curtis position, is to be expected. Their own candidates are pledged to repeal both personally and by platform.

To complicate the vexed picture of the place prohibition will have in the election, Bishop James Cannon, Jr., contributed from Switzerland where he is traveling, his awaited statement as to the Hoover prohibition views. He charged the President had "surrendered" on prohibition enforcement.

Like the convention of the Women's Christian Temperance Union in Seattle, which predicted the rise of a new party, the bishop saw only in the congressional elections a place for advocates of federal prohibition.

Answers Radicalism Charge

Speaker Garner sought to refute during his New York visit the charge of radicalism raised in the east by Republican spokesmen. It was promptly reiterated from the newly established Republican general headquarters in New York City.

More than that, Republican plans to throw Secretaries Mills and Hurley into the Maine state campaign which terminates Sept. 12 were disclosed. That will be the first real test of the election.

On the Democratic side plans for a Roosevelt 21-state swing through middle, north and southwest and the Pacific coast in September were announced. Before that, however, what the Democratic candidate will say in answer to President Hoover at his speech tomorrow in Columbus, O., was the next major scheduled event of the campaign.

With that speech, the Democratic presidential drive will be fully launched. President Hoover's personal campaign plans are yet to be disclosed in detail.

Water Resorts on Sunday Tour Route as Season Nears Close

With the season for the popularity of water resorts nearing a close, Mrs. D. Y. Gallagher, secretary of the Marion Auto club, has prepared routings that will permit Marion motorists to reach their favorite beach by the most direct routes during next Sunday's drive.

Many will seek resorts along Lake Erie. The recommended route to the lake lies over route 4 from Marion to Sandusky, by way of Bucyrus and Attica. At Sandusky, one may choose from a variety of parks and resorts including Cedar Point, Lakeside, and a number of beaches.

Others will turn toward Indian Lake, or the Lewistown reservoir for a Sunday of fishing or a day's outing. The most popular route to this point lies over route 4 to the south to Marysville, route 32 from Marysville to Bellefontaine, and route 32 from Bellefontaine to the lake.

The other principal water resort in this section of Ohio is Buckeye lake, east of Columbus. Probably the most satisfactory route lies over route 23 to Columbus, route 40 from Columbus to a point 25 miles east of Columbus where route 40 intersects route 157. Follow route 157 to the lake.

Another resort which is popular with Marion tourists, and where several local residents have summer homes, is Wightman's Grove, on the Sandusky river, eight miles from Fremont. The best road now open to the Grove is route 4 to Bucyrus, route 19 through Green Springs to Fremont and route 6 from Fremont. Signs at the junction of route 6 and the county road direct traffic to the grove.

Persons not acquainted with the resorts and activities available at these bodies of water may obtain detailed information from the Auto club. Both Indian Lake and Buckeye Lake are bordered by several communities or parks, and Lake Erie is lined with various resorts and parks.

The Reunion Season.

The family reunion season now appears to be at its peak. The custom of holding these annual family gatherings seems to have had its beginning a quarter of a century or so ago and since then has been increasing steadily. Now, judging from the numerous accounts in the columns of this newspaper, it must be that few groups of relations large enough to warrant get-together events are not observing the annual custom.

It is a custom that is good for the nation. It tends to keep down the inclination in some kinship-groups to become indifferent to the ties of relationship as years pass and frequently even to permit an attitude of unfriendliness to develop.

Anything that serves to cement these bonds and to help strengthen and fortify the family unit, the real foundation of national stability and progress, is a valuable contribution to the public good.

Sources of Happiness.

In these days when the tendency toward gloom is prevalent and too many people lack the faculty of seeing anything for which they are inclined to be thankful, inspiration may be found in the viewpoint of Mrs. Hannah Fletcher of Richwood, who though blind, possesses spirit and intelligence that enable her to get much out of life.

A news story a few days ago told of how she has found a new avenue of enjoyment in the modern motion picture with its sound and talking attachments. Through her keen sense of hearing and mental discernment, she sits through a picture and follows the story with full understanding of all its details. The news account tells us that her enjoyment of a play is as keen as with those who are able to see as well as hear the portrayal.

She enters into her household duties and other affairs of life with the same zest and interest and thus exemplifies to others the fact that the secret and source of happiness is to take full advantage of the resources that are provided and to place less thought and emphasis on liabilities and handicaps.

Proving What?

Columbia university's college for teachers, foremost hot weather clearing house for interesting comment, has produced another interesting fact concerning an important social trend. To Dr. Paul Popence, director of the Institute of Family Relations at Los Angeles, goes the credit for disclosing in a Columbia lecture that the national divorce rate does not represent the outcome of college romances.

Although one out of six marriages in the United States ends in divorce, not more than one out of 75 marriages traceable to acquaintanceships made in college turns out unsuccessfully, the doctor claims. It is not surprising that he advocates more attention to this type of social service by higher educational institutions. "One of the greatest contributions the high school and college can make to individual happiness, social stability and eugenic progress is to socialize their student bodies, even if it means a renunciation of the medieval monastic ideals to which some of them still unconsciously but desperately cling," is his statement.

There is but one way to ward off the foremost destroyer of marriages—incompatibility. That is to seek compatibility before the marital slip-knot is drawn tight. It is a course requiring time, wisdom, patience and an environment allowing free exercise of those talents and emotions which are the expressions of character. Dr. Popence relates that his study of a group of "highly educated and successfully married" persons revealed 2,208 essential factors of success in marriage. Perhaps Americans should congratulate themselves for having a divorce for every six marriages, instead of wondering what to do about it.

At last there is another reason for sending the children to college. Instead of justifying the expense by motives concerned with the thorough development of brain cells not always susceptible to development, increasing the young man or young lady's chance for a successful marriage can be cited with vastly more logic and sound purpose.

Air Mail for 62 Years.

Air mail was inaugurated 62 years ago, it is revealed by the U. S. postoffice department. In 1870 free balloons carrying 500 pounds of mail were set loose in Paris to drift wherever the wind carried them. Now planes carry the mail from coast to coast on a 24-hour schedule and airmen flash through the sky at 120 miles an hour between principal centers throughout the country.

America leads the world in air mail development. This is largely because this country has an expanse of highly developed territory to be found nowhere else.

Mail has been carried in airplanes since Sept. 23, 1911, when an aviator maintained a regular service between an aviation meeting on Long Island and the postoffice at Mineola. It was not until after the war that regular service was established with a route between New York and Washington. This has expanded until the entire country is served and the scope of the air mail is being extended constantly.

It may be predicted with reasonable assurance that within a few years every city of importance will have its direct air mail service, thus saving hours from the present transmission of written messages, days from the service of a few years ago and weeks from the time it took the postman of grandfather's day to get the mail through.

Soup Line Swindle.

A judge in Spokane, Wash., has fined a man $250 for patronizing the municipal soup line for three months. He told the investigators that he was penniless and hungry and they fed him, along with several hundred other unfortunates. Then they learned that he had nearly $5,000 in the bank. He was guilty of obtaining his soup under false pretenses, the court ruled.

It is a sensible decision and a just verdict. In this period of unusual privation public and private charitable organizations are taxed to the limit to supply the needs of those who are in actual distress. The man who asks for and receives help which he does not need is the worst kind of a thief, for he is taking food from those who really need it.

The welfare organizations, for the most part, are doing a capable job of preventing impositions of this kind. Virtually every relief group has found among its applicants some who sought to take advantage of public and private generosity while hoarding their own resources. They have been cut off but Spokane goes farther. If a fine could be assessed against such swindlers, the money to be applied to welfare funds for the relief of those actually in need, complete justice would prevail.

They Want the Bonus.

The Ohio state convention of the American Legion did the expected thing in voting for immediate payment of the bonus. The national convention doubtless will take the same action.

The veterans who want their money now instead of waiting until 1945 are so determined that leaders, who warded off the bonus demand at last year's convention, can not keep it out of this year's meeting.

The legion's action has nothing to do with the economics of the matter nor the effect which the payment of these billions to the veterans would have on a treasury already sorely unbalanced. These are questions for congress, the treasury department and other of the nation's leaders.

The voice of the legion is that of men who believe they have some money coming to them and who want it now, an entirely understandable desire at a time when many are unemployed and in distress. There are few in America who do not wish that it were possible to pay them at once just as there is a universal wish that all who are in need might be relieved.

The next congress will have the bonus question dumped in its lap as an issue cleared of uncertainty as to the stand which the legionnaires themselves maintain. The resolution, however, does not clear the situation of its economic problems, chief of which is the circumstance that if the nation's financial straits were to be relieved to the extent that such a sum of money would be available industrial conditions would also be so improved that most of the veterans would be back at work and would not need the money.

Beautiful Ohio.

Ohioans are learning more about their state this year than they have ever known. A couple of gasoline filling station attendants are authority for a discovery which we have already suspected.

The number of out of state tourists who drive in for a filling of gasoline is the smallest in several years but visitors from other parts of the state are numerous. Ohioans are awakening to the fact that they can see some of the country's natural wonders as well as some of its most historic spots without going outside the boundaries of their own state. Caverns of Ohio equal those of Virginia for their coloring and formations, the rivers of the state match the Hudson for their scenic beauty while the rolling hill country of the southern part of the state is a revelation to the nature lover.

It is especially timely to call to the attention of motorists as fall approaches for the autumn coloring of the Ohio woods is one of nature's grandest spectacles. Even a one-day trip affords great possibilities for the enjoyment of nature.

Ohio touring is as inexpensive as it is delightful. Comfortable tourist homes and camps which dot every road make it possible to travel well at an all-expense cost of $8.50 a day per person. We recommend an automobile trip through Ohio in September or October as a vacation long to be remembered.

Comment of the Press

THE NEW HOOVER.

It seems as if a new Hoover were trying to struggle out through that acceptance speech—or perhaps the old Hoover for whom so many of us thought we were voting in 1928. For there was in it a degree of candor, of definite commitment and of deep feeling such as we have not seen in any speech by the President since he entered the White House.

Whatever he is or whatever he isn't, however we may have been irritated at him or however we may have admired him, we must admit that he has shown a quality that may well bring the sound common sense of the nation to his side. Nothing that Franklin Roosevelt has said, as governor or as presidential candidate, takes rank with it. If we have to choose between these two men—as we do if we look upon neither of them as the ideal leader of the nation, we may at least admit in our heart of heart that the acceptance speech shows us a new Hoover, who in his sheer mental capacity offers by far the better prospect for the present and future of these United States.—New York Post.

CURTAILING SCHOOLS POOR ECONOMY.

The decision of the Board of Education to shorten the 1932-33 school year by four weeks brings home to every parent and taxpayer forcible realization that the city's financial distress is forcing it to drastic retrenchments. The need for this particular curtailment, out of the many made in the past 18 months, will be regretted by every taxpayer.

The academic penalty imposed on the school child is not a heavy one. He probably can learn as much from his books in nine months as in 10.

But a city is a difficult place for many a child to live. He needs more help in an urban environment than in a smaller community. The streets are dangerous for him, and parks are far away. Outside the four walls of his home there are few safe places for his activities beyond the school, and to deny him its facilities for a period of time, is to work a real hardship.

Economy at the expense of school children is distinctly an emergency measure and will be universally recognized as such. The remedy for it is for those who can pay taxes to pay them now, and for

Sun baths have become exceedingly popular within the last few years. To take them has become a mania with some, while by many others it is regarded as an indispensable part of the summer holiday.

Whether in the city or in the country, one can always see these modern worshippers of the sun. In the city, roofs and other available spaces are utilized, while at the seaside the body is exposed on the beaches to the penetrating and beneficial rays of the sun.

Gradual and regular exposure of the body to the sun is beneficial. It not only gives a healthy appearance to the skin, but it also enables the body to absorb and store vitamin D, so necessary for protection of the body against rickets and other constitutional disturbances. It is most important for the growing child, who has great need for this vitamin. For this reason sun baths are advised for all infants, as well as giving them cod liver oil.

But it must not be overlooked that too long exposure of the body to the sun in the beginning is detrimental. When the skin is first exposed there is an inflammatory reaction shown by redness and burning of the skin. It is similar to a "first degree" burn, such as may result from brief contact with hot liquids or fire.

When the protective layer of the skin is destroyed and blisters form this is called a "second degree" burn, and may often prove serious.

In severe exposure to fire, irritating acids or scalding liquids, the underlying structure of the skin may be destroyed, and this is spoken of as a "third degree" burn. Such a serious burn may occur when the body unused to it is exposed to the sun for a long period of time. It should be noted, too, that overexposure to the sun is more likely to damage blonds and fair people, who have very sensitive skins.

Gradual exposure of the skin to the sun therefore is the only safe method. When the skin is slowly exposed tanning occurs, and this gives the skin protection against the harmful action of sunburn. With a good coat of tan you can stay in the sun for an indefinite period every day. Too many vacations have been ruined and many serious ailments have resulted from careless exposure of the body to the sun; so go slow, and get a good coat of tan before trying a long sun-bath.

During the summer months it is seldom necessary to give cod liver oil to a child, but during the winter, when the sunlight is not abundant or strong, cod liver oil should be given to assure the child receiving sufficient quantities of vitamin D. However, if a child is underweight and shows signs of rickets, cod liver oil should not be discontinued during the warm weather, even if the child gets plenty of sunshine.

TRAVELING IN 1830.

A New England trader, Isaac Appleton, made a business trip to central Ohio about 1830 and traveled from Zanesville to Columbus by stage. He has left a story of the experience that is interesting.

"From Zanesville to Columbus," he wrote, "we saw the wilderness in all its gloominess, and experienced self constructed roads in all their terror. We felt as if carried back to the time of the first settlers. Our vehicle, which in the dialect of the country, was called a 'spanker,' carried four passengers and was drawn by four strong horses at the rate of two miles an hour.

"What, with the recollections of the preceding day, the fearful anticipations of the future, the wintry winds driving through the stage, the warnings of the driver to be prepared for any and all hazards, the confessions of a timid traveler of horses frightened by howling wolves, of stages overturned, of bones dislocated, and lives in jeopardy—all of which he had heard of and some of which he had seen; what with traveling all night and arriving in Columbus just before day-break, and there finding four of the hotels at which we applied not only full, but crowded, so that admittance for the night was out of the question, it was a trip not soon to be forgotten."

New York Day by Day

New York, Aug. 19 — Thoughts while strolling: The Mammy song all of a sudden goes Mom. One word description of Genevieve Tobin—posey. Whatever became of the vaudevillian, Artie Mehlinger? Those jungle-like peepings from subway gratings. Nobody can grin like George Olsen.

Earl Carroll's ruddy brother, Jim. And his big cheroot. When I pass the Claridge corner, I think of Tommy Gray. He passed Marcus Loew and Lee Shubert there one morning and flipped: "Hi Lee, Hi Loew!" What we once called a "brat" is now a "modern child." I've often wished at parties I could jump up and do Pat Rooney's dance. Jesse Lasky's glasses always seem about to fall off. There appears to be a panic in "It," also. Or is it my years? Heywood Broun's Haw-vahd accent.

Mary Boland is remindful of a flushed apple tree in Normandy. Doesn't seem right for Blanche Ring and Charles Winninger to be apart. There he goes—nibbing in. Dennis King has a romantic swagger off stage, too. It's a convenient alibi—all the big financiers playing broke. But what hooey!

Overheard: "And now winter. So what?" Dull-eyed sandwich men—caught in life's undertow. But they have company. Eva La Gallienne is a statue in chalk. They say theatrical people sprinkle salt in letters for good luck. Roger Wolfe Kahn eating in an albino-tiled restaurant.

For some reason I miss those brisk fellows who used to try to sell us lots in the Ozone Parks and Fairview Manors. I want to say "hey, hey!" after Edna St. Vincent Millay. They've sent me a monkey, two horned toads and a Siamese cat, so far this year. Any day now, I'm expecting a pet bison.

Harry Evans, who brought thoughtful consideration to movie criticism, recently compiled a list of steady-going performers on the screen who, never meteoric, are always dependable. They play crooks, waiters, chauffeurs, butlers, maids and sewing women and, like the great common people are the backbone of enterprise. The best, I think, is the omniscient Lewis Stone.

The Ringling circus started off the season by running up biggest receipts ever in New York. On tour, with minor exceptions, they kept up this pace. The phenomenon in depression times is history repeating itself. In decadent Rome, when everything else went bloocy, the populace packed the arena shows.

No people interest me so much as circus folk. There is a tug in their forthright simplicity. Clyde Beatty, twice daily facing the furious slashes of a cage of mixed lions and tigers, proves to be an Ohio farm boy, fearful to enter an avenue haberdashery for a muffler he fancied in the window. Too, whirling Lillian Leitzel, whose tragic fall deprived the big top of its acknowledged queen. Somewhere on my desk is a postcard sent shortly before her passing. She was at the Cirque d'Hiver in Paris and wrote: "Chestnut trees will soon be in beautiful white bloom." It impressed me with its naivete, because in the same mail came a scribble from an American vaudevillian: "Wowing them at the Casino de Paris. Eiffel Tower will blink my name yet."

Walking along East 17th street today, I recognized a block where a dead-and-gone beer hall once flourished. It featured a blackish brew with a fine-grained, bubbly head like shaving lather—an ebony fathom cuffed in cream. As I recall, it bore the name "Kulmbacher." Anyway, there was a depressing Saturday noon when a whistling copy boy plopped an official envelope before me. A curt note read: "Your services will not be needed after today." What galled most was the indefinable pity of my fellow copy readers. They knew. Newspaper shops, like the jungle, have a mysterious telegraphy. As I looked up none could meet my gaze. Anyway, I stepped into the rake-hell glamour of this beer hall to fortify myself for the ordeal of telling my wife. Downing two, I went home and lied, in a miraculous manner, that I had a better job. What is more, by Monday I did have. Ah, glorious Kulmbacher! — Copyright, 1932, McNaught Syndicate, Inc.

Daily Talk to Parents
BY ALICE JUDSON PEALE

MISTRUST.

Mother, looking at the peach tree which had just begun to bear, decided that some one had been stealing the almost ripe peaches. There had been 18 yesterday. Today she could count only eleven.

She called her small son. "Somebody has been stealing the peaches off this tree. Do you know anything about it?" The boy looked blank. "Come now, don't pretend. You know you know."

"Well, I don't," the boy stoutly replied, "not one single thing."

"Are you sure it wasn't you and some of those boys?"

"Yes, I'm sure it wasn't. Honest."

"I'm sorry, I don't believe you. You and your friends are the only ones who would know about the peaches being near ripe. I'm afraid I shall have to believe that you not only stole them, but that you're lying about it now."

"All right. Believe anything you like. I don't care what you think. I didn't steal your old peaches, but now I wish I had!"

Undoubtedly if this mother persists in her attitude of suspicion, if she continues to make accusations without conclusive evidence, this boy will make good his omission. He will certainly both lie and steal and he will do it with a good conscience. He will simply in his own mind be getting even for what he quite rightly feels is an insult.

If you are absolutely sure of a child's guilt you may tell him so and deal with the case according to its merits. But where the least doubt exists, don't run the risk of accusing a child who in spite of appearances still may be innocent. For the child who feels that he is unjustly under suspicion carries a rankling sense of injustice which shouts for an appropriate revenge.

FULL YEAR OF SCHOOL SURE

Morrow County State Aid Districts Given Increased Assistance.

Special to The Star

MT. GILEAD, Aug. 18—Nine months of school for all state aid consolidated schools in Morrow county are assured by the action of the state department of education in agreeing to defray the transportation costs in all such schools for the added two weeks. Many of the schools were contemplating a term of eight and one-half months because of lack of sufficient funds for the full term.

The Bennington township board of education was the first Morrow county board to take advantage of the ruling. They have announced that the Marengo schools will have a nine months term. Chesterville, Johnsville, Cardington and Sparta are expected to follow.

The nine months' term for the state aid schools was forecast by the action of the state department in fixing the teachers' salaries on an annual basis this year instead of a monthly basis as in the past. Since the local boards will have no more expense for salaries for the longer term and since the transportation costs will be borne by the state department the added expense for the longer term will be negligible.

While most of the school districts are hampered by lack of funds all state aid schools in the county have made plans for regular terms.

My Beauty Hint

BY BETTE DAVIS

GIVING my face a vacation is one of the best aids to beauty I know. Since rest is the great rejuvenator of the body, I go a step farther, and occasionally when I am alone I bestow a separate rest on my face—a vacation from makeup.

At home, in the garden or in my studio dressing room, I frequently go without beauty aids. As a result, when I use cosmetics my face meets the public so refreshed it need not fear the most searching light.

CHAPTER THIRTY-SIX

Standing By a Mistake

PRESENTLY Sondra went on quite falteringly—

"You've never really known me, Mark—not as I am. I know you love me, but sometimes . . . well love is supposed to be blind, isn't it? You mustn't mind if it hurts you—what I am going to say—but if we're ever going to be . . . well, if we're ever going to be happy, we must understand each other, mustn't we, dear?"

Mark turned then, and looked at her.

"Was Anderson ever your lover?" he asked.

"No—no—never."

There was a little silence, and she closed her eyes.

"Well?" he said patiently.

Sondra went on.

"I've never had any money of my own—I don't think you knew that, and I hated being poor. Flora was good to me—while she lived with Ben—but even that wasn't enough . . . I don't think you understand that there are lots of girls in the world like me—girls who take expensive presents from men and think nothing about it—men they don't care anything about—"

"As you did from Anderson—" he interrupted.

"Yes—" she caught her breath. "As I did. He was rich, and I didn't see any harm in it—there wasn't, really . . . You see—" she moved her hands helplessly. "I knew you loved me—I loved you too—at least . . . but I was afraid—so I asked John to give you that post—to send you away, because I was afraid, I knew we should be poor and I loathed being poor . . . Then the—when I knew you were really going I felt as if I couldn't bear it, and so . . . well, you know the rest."

She stopped with a feeling of amazement at herself. Had she ever loved this man so utterly that she had been driven to make the greatest mistake of her life? She felt as if she was telling him about someone else—repeating a story she had heard.

She went on presently. "Well, you went away—and then Flora left Ben, and I hadn't anything—only a few dollars, I suppose I ought to have told you but somehow I couldn't. Then—Mark— you must try to understand, dear—Mr. Anderson asked me to marry him. His wife died—you know that—and so . . . so I had to tell him that I was already married to you."

He gave a bitter little laugh. "That was hard luck Sondra—a rich man like Anderson—"

She said brokenly, "Don't be . . . unkind, Mark—"

"Unkind! . . ." he opened his eyes suddenly, eyes dark with pain. "When I was on the way home, I came across a little verse in a book someone lent me . . . it was this—'Can't thou be true across so many miles, so many days that keep us still apart' . . . I thought what rubbish it was—when two people loved one another . . . I don't think so now."

"You don't believe me—you don't believe me—"

"I am not fool enough to believe that any man will do for a woman what Anderson has done for you, without some hope of return—no doubt he sent me away because it suited him—to leave the field clear."

Sondra said quietly, "You don't know John if you can say that."

There was a little silence, then Mark said dully "And now I suppose I am to be under a fresh obligation to him—this new job—for your sake, no doubt, or perhaps to get me out of the way once more. I suppose you are going to tell me I must go alone—"

Sondra's face quivered. "Do you think I should have married you, if I had cared for—for anyone else?" she asked.

"You ought never to have married me—I've nothing to offer you—I may never have."

"You've given me your love"—Sondra said.

It was like sitting by, watching other people, she thought; she would not believe that it was she herself who was trying so hard, and with such an empty heart, to convince him that she loved him.

He said suddenly "At lunch today—I suppose Anderson made love to you—I suppose you never thought of me."

"We spoke of you all the time—and of your future."

That was true enough—they had both kept the thought of Mark before them, daring one another to forget him.

She said brokenly—"if you can't trust me, Mark, or believe in me again, what sort of a future do you think we shall have?"

"It's a pity I didn't die . . . you would have been free."

She closed her eyes; often during the last few weeks some such thought had been in her own mind; and now she hated herself for it.

Mark was a sick man; a pitiful man still when one contrasted him with the lover of a few months ago. A sudden wave of infinite pity swept through Sondra's heart. She could no omre have hurt him now than she could have hurt a child.

"Perhaps I shan't always feel like this," she told herself wildly. "Perhaps tomorrow I shall be my old self again—wanting a good time . . . wanting—John. I'm not really unselfish,—I don't want to sacrifice anything, but all the same . . ."

She felt the tears on her cheeks, and she drew her hand from Mark's to wipe them away.

He turned quickly—"Sondra—" She would not look at him. "Do you love me, Sondra? if you do—nothing else matters."

For a moment she was silent; for a moment a wild impulse came to her to tell him the truth, to say "I love John—let me go—I can't stay with you."

But the moment passed, leaving her weak and shaken.

She had married this man because she had wanted him—was it his fault that she wanted him no longer?

John had said one should always stand by their mistakes . . .

"Don't you know I love you?" she said, and she kissed him.

"Heart of a Wife"

BY ADELE GARRISON

At the Mountain Glen Tea Room the "Chief," Harry Underwood and Ronald, John Madge and Hugh for a Council of War.

THE silence that followed Hugh Grantland's announcement of Lee Chow's disappearance was a devastating thing, paralyzing in its hopelessness. I could not speak, and I guessed that Mary had the same horror choking her throat. The Mertons, naturally, made no comment, but their sober, intent faces showed that they realized the gravity of the situation.

"Does that mean—" I asked the question at last, fearfully — "that those Chinese may have Lee Chow in their power?"

"God alone knows what it means," Hugh's voice held no tremor, but there was in it a flatness of quenched hope and baffled initiative.

A new Problem

I waited another interminable minute, then spoke again.

"If you do not hear from him before tonight—the time you have set for the rescue—will you go on with your plans, or do you think it would be better to deliver Marion's box to them? It is here in Dr. Barnes' safe, you know. Father went out and got it yesterday."

Hugh's heavy eyebrows knitted in a puzzled frown.

"The introduction of the Chinese element into this problem changes everything," he said soberly. "If we could be sure that they would keep their word, I should favor turning the box over to them, but people capable of even thinking the threat that this letter contains would have no hesitancy in taking the box and then destroying the girls, so that we could not trace them."

In Despair

"But the final decision is not mine to make," he went on slowly. "That must be the lot of Harry Underwood; perhaps Lillian. Mrs. Brixton is, of course, in no condition to be told anything, and her husband—who knows?" He spread his hands in a gesture of futility.

To see Hugh thus quiescent and despairing was to me most terrifying. Always he had spelled to me courage and resourcefulness raised to the nth power. He had been so confident of success in his plan of attack upon the hiding place of the kidnapers, that I knew nothing but a body blow like this disappearance of Lee Chow could have daunted his spirit.

For I knew—no one better—how great was Hugh's reliance upon the sapience and resourcefulness of his high-born Chinese friend, who for so many years had lived under the menace of death—and death by torture—at the hands of enemies among his own race. Because of his friendship for Lee Chow, and his gratitude to him for braving numberless perils in his behalf, Hugh also had lived under the same menace.

Had He Been Wrong?

But Lee Chow himself had said that all danger from his countrymen was definitely over. Had the wise old Chinese been mistaken, or—?

Hugh rose to his feet so suddenly that it was like a spring. His head was raised, his shoulders thrown back, and he was all dominant energy again.

"I'll just go and walk up and down outside a bit," he said abruptly, and went out of the door before any of us could speak, even if we had been willing to disturb him.

"If there's nothing you want of us," Mrs. Merton said softly, "we'll see that the room upstairs is ready for your friends whenever they come. Just sound the little bell on the table if you want us."

He Is Armored

"Thank you," I answered, dully conscious that they were guessing I had no time or thought save for watching Hugh, as he ranged up and down like some feral animal in the narrow clearing between the house and the road. Indeed, I did not even see them go out of the room, so intent was I upon that rapidly moving figure.

Fear for the outcome of the rescue plan amounting almost to despair, was crippling him. I knew; but there was now in his mien no trace of the surprising fortitude of his courageous resourcefulness that I had witnessed a few minutes earlier. He was armored again, and I knew that while he might lose his objective, it would not be until he himself was dead, or so sorely stricken that he could fight no longer.

Before I heard the slightest sound on the road I saw Hugh Grantland whirl and stand still, looking down the road toward Sackettsville. The next moment a furiously driven motor car drew up so suddenly that the protesting brakes shrilled to Heaven, and the careening car came within a split inch of upsetting.

My father, of course, I told myself when I had caught my breath again. No one else drives so madly as he, or so censors the driving of any woman.

And with him were Harry Underwood and Ronald. As I saw the boy my pulses bounded excitedly. Had Helena been brought back to sanity, and would Lillian, released from her promise, be able to accompany the men on the expedition to rescue her child?

LABORATORY YIELDS NEW FACTS ON KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN

Its "Bulk" and Vitamin B Help Relieve Constipation; Also Has Blood-building Iron

New laboratory experiments demonstrate that Kellogg's ALL-BRAN has sufficient "bulk" to exercise the intestines, as well as Vitamin B to help tone the intestinal tract.

In addition, Kellogg's ALL-BRAN supplies twice as much blood-building iron as an equal amount by weight of beef liver.

Now you can overcome common constipation by this pleasant "cereal way," and banish the headaches, backaches, loss of appetite and energy that so frequently result.

No need to worry along with pills and drugs, which often lead to harmful habits.

Instead, just eat two tablespoonfuls daily of Kellogg's ALL-BRAN—adequate for most types of constipation. If your intestinal trouble is not relieved this way, see your doctor. The "bulk" in ALL-BRAN is much like that of lettuce. Inside the body, it forms a soft mass, which gently clears the intestines of wastes.

Special processes make ALL-BRAN finer, softer, more palatable. It is not habit-forming. Equally tasty as a cereal, or used in cooking. Recipes on the red-and-green package. At all grocers. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

1932 Moundsmen Pack Plenty of Punch When They Appear at Plate

By The Associated Press

NEW YORK — The old days when a pitcher lugged a bat up to the plate merely for a bit of mild exercise are passing in these days when ball players like every one else are putting on extra pressure to stick on a payroll.

The fact that a number of modern hurlers are taking a hefty cut at the ball was brought sharply to attention the other day when Red Ruffing slammed a home run in the tenth inning to beat the Senators, 1-0. The big Yankee carrot top gathered three hits during the game, equal to the entire Washington collection.

Ruffing frequently has been used as a pinch hitter on a club as powerful as the Yankees, but even so there are several other hurlers in the American league as danger at the plate. The National league likewise has pitchers who are considered anything but a "soft touch" when waving a bat.

Monte Weaver, Washington's sensational rookie, has been hailed as one of the pitching finds of the year, but it is not so well known that he ha a batting average that many an alleged heavy hitting outfielder would envy. While he has been rolling up some 20 victories, Weaver's batting average has been in the neighborhood of .348. He has driven home more than a dozen runs.

Clint Brown and Wes Ferrell of the Cleveland Indians have furnished the Tribe a line-up of nine hitters when pitching this season. Brown has been particularly dangerous with men on base, and Ferrell still is the slugger that once almost got him converted into an outfielder. George Uhle of the Tigers is used as a pinch hitter.

Red Lucas of the Cincinnati Reds is one of the most effective hitters in the National league among pitchers, outfielders of what have you. The Brooklyn Dodgers also have a collection of pitchers who can do their own pinch hitting, including Joe Shaute, Fred Heimach and Hollis Thurston.

Freddy Fitzsimmons of the Giants brings no smiles of relief to the opposition in the plate and Dizzy Dean of the Cards gives promise of becoming a real hitter.

This matter of pitchers hitting is not a 1932 invention. Babe Ruth was a pitcher and something of a hitter—but seldom have they been in such profusion. The boys are in there swinging for that dough.

Weis entered the finals by defeating John Rife 6 to 5 while Sharrock did not have such clear sailing in his match with Dr. A. J. Wagner. Wagner lost one down in 21 holes after leading Sharrock four holes with four to go.

In the second flight Ray Grummel and Ray Williams will tangle. Grummel defeated Dr. B. H. Taylor 3-2 and Williams defeated Jo Howe, 1 up.

Vangler and Novak Slated To Battle in Mat Feature

Sammy Vangler, the tough welterweight who is probably the most hated and at the same time the most respected 145-pound wrestler to ever appear in Marion, will swing into action here again next Monday night when he meets Bobby Novak of Kansas City in a bout heading the weekly mat program at Shovel Arena.

Vangler has appeared here many times and practically every time he has ever entered the ring here he's literally caused a riot. This will be a return bout between Novak and Vangler, the two having clashed on a semi-final here two weeks ago in a two out of three falls, 45-minute limit bout. In that tilt Vangler won one fall after some bitter wrestling. But Novak came back with a vengeance, carried the going right to Vangler for the remainder of the time limit and so hard did he bear down that Vangler was stalling for time at the finish.

The semi-final Monday night will see the advent here of Bulldog Jackson of Nome, Alaska, slated as one of the roughest, toughest and hardest individuals that has ever set foot in a Marion ring.

Jackson has been through a gold rush in Alaska, has fought rough and tumble with lumberjacks and sour doughs in that hard corner of the world, and he isn't particular about how he wins just as long as he is the winner.

Jackson, while only a welterweight, is one of the most feared rough and tumble wrestlers that ever came out of the northwest.

Matchmaker Kauffman has signed the tough little Detroit Irishman, Pat Finnegan to take on the Bulldog. Finnegan is no stranger here, having appeared here about a year ago. Pat doesn't claim any rough and tumble championships but he's not averse to going that method if occasion demands.

MILLERS' LEAD OVER RED BIRDS BOOSTED

By The Associated Press

CHICAGO, Aug. 19—A little brisk work by Art Ruble and his bat, and some cooperation from its sister city, St. Paul, and Minneapolis today had increased its lead over Columbus to five and one-half games.

While St. Paul was beating Columbus, the runner-up, 9 to 5, yesterday, Ruble and the Millers trimmed Toledo, 10 to 6. Ruble turned in a perfect day at bat, with two home runs and three singles in five times up.

The Saints spotted Columbus four runs in the first inning and another in the second, but produced power enough to break down the lead and get one of their own. Russ Van Atta accounted for his seventeenth pitching victory of the campaign, while Ash, third of the five Red Bird hurlers, was charged with the defeat.

CUBS AND BRAVES STAGE MARATHON AS GAMES GO OVERTIME

Three-Game Series Totals 43 Innings; Chicago Wins All.

By The Associated Press

No matter who may win the national league pennant, the Chicago Cubs and Boston Braves seem to have clinched the marathon championship beyond a doubt.

They've just completed a three-game series and the Cubs have had to travel 43 innings—the equivalent of almost five ordinary contests—to win three one-run decisions.

Charley Grimm's outfit scored four runs in the ninth to win the first game, 4-3, Tuesday, and Wednesday the clubs battled through 19 innings before the Cubs won, 3-2. They fought through another extra inning thriller yesterday until Riggs Stephenson broke up the ball game in the fifteenth with a single that gave the Cubs a 4-3 triumph and stretched their league lead to 2½ games over the idle Pirates.

The Phillies turned back the St. Louis Cardinals in both ends of a double-header, 10-4 and 9-4. The Phils uncorked one five-run rally in the third frame of the opener and another in the sixth. They won the second game with another five-run rally in the fifth inning. The New York Giants made it four in a row from Cincinnati, 7-3. Waite Hoyt held the Reds in subjection until the eighth when he lost control and had to be relieved by Adolf Luque.

The only American league game of the day was a spectacular struggle between the Boston Red Sox and St. Louise Browns which the former won, 7-6 in 15 innings.

CAREER OF DRIVER ENDS WITH VICTORY

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON C. H., O., Aug. 19—His long racing career climaxed with a final victory, 90-year-old "Uncle Stephen" Phillips prepared today for the ease of retirement.

The famous old driver of harness horses, drove Frederick McKinney to victory yesterday in the third heat of the feature race at the Fayette county fair.

ENTERS NEW ARENA

The blue and brown colors of the famous Whitney stables will soon flash in an arena other than the race track. Cornelius Vanderbilt Whitney, famous sportsman and and race-horse owner, has made his debut in the political field in accepting the Democratic nomination for congressman from the First New York district. He will oppose Robert L. Bacon.

ONE MARION FIGHTER SURVIVES IN SECOND GROUP OF TOURNEY

Nine Matches Held on Program of North Central Ohio Amateur.

Nine matches in the north central Ohio amateur tournament were held last night at the Shovel arena before approximately 200 fans.

The matches were a part of the elimination round of the tournament to name amateur champions in the eight boxing classes for the section of the state.

Only two Marion boys fought last night. Kid Stumbell was eliminated by Wayne Hare of Bucyrus in the third round by a technical knockout. John Earl of Marion stayed in the running by forcing Dan Fortaunotto of Tiffin to go enough in the second round.

Wesley of Tiffin had no trouble defeating Knight of Delaware in a one-sided match. Dominick Alello of Tiffin decisioned Kid Kraus of Upper Sandusky in a hard fought battle.

In the best battle of the evening Burnsides of Martel won by a technical knockout over Marcelli of Tiffin. Burnsides pasted the Tiffin boy with the old one-two.

Utter of Ashley decisioned Stafer of Tiffin while Candle of Bucyrus was given his match with Bud Rybolt of Delaware.

Weights of the winners were Wesley 112; Hare 120, White 125, Fair 125, Earl 128, Alello 135, Burnsides 136, Utter 145 and Candle 163.

The final elimination round will be held next Thursday night when half of the original 75 entrants will have been retired.

LeRoy Dane and Harold Dane brothers, put on an exhibition bout as a preliminary to last night's card. The match was declared a draw. Another attraction was a battle royal with six colored boys taking part.
